It's the story of a wealthy New Yorker who seeks revenge when he discovers that the girl he loves is apparently more interested in his money than she is in himself. In the end the experiment as a medium of revenge does not come up to expectations, for the girl is not as mercenary as she appears.

The Tribune Fresh Air Fund

Campbells Return From Highlands, Near Glens Falls, Bonnie, Braw Lassies

"The Campbells are coming!"

In fact they're here—got here last night, straight from the highlands, too, Mary and Ellen and Ethel. The Tribune Fresh Air Fund sent them up to the Highlands round about Glens Falls, N. Y., on July 7. But on that date you'd never have recognized them as the Campbells. They were puny, pale and sick—everything that bonnie Scots lassies are supposed not to be.

But last night when Mother Campbell enfolded them in her arms after their eight weeks absence—or presence—in the Highlands! Hoot mon, y'wadna ha'e kent them for the same lassies! They looked as braw and brecht, as plump and rosy as any Scotch mither could wish. And you'd have recognized them at a glance, if not as the Campbells of song and story, at least as the prototypes of those almost-as-famous Campbell Kids. Eight weeks of the sun and milk, the eggs and fruit, the meats and vegetables, the sunshine and fresh air provided by the Glens Falls Fresh Air Fund, had done them out beyond all Mother Campbell's expectations. Mary had gained nine pounds, Ellen four and a half and wee Ethel four.

They brought back with them, too, something less ponderable, but equally valuable to them, the wholehearted approval and the sincere affection of the folks who had been their hosts during the summer. One had only to list the names of the children who had been with them for a moment to Miss Bertha Hampton, who escorted them back to New York, to discover that. They are little darlings. "Everybody loved them," they were as good as gold all the time.

The Campbells were only three samples of the one hundred Fresh Air Fund children who had been with them. The Glens Falls committee played host this summer. To get a true picture of the committee's work one would have to list the names of the hundred youngsters at least an hour in which to tell of his or her wonderful experiences. But an idea of the spirit in which the committee went at its work and carried it through.

Former Ensign Seeks Reduction in Alimony

Ballard Alleges Wife in Suit Testified to $50,000 Inheritance That He Never Got

CHARLES BALLARD, member of a socially prominent family of Louisville, Ky., who was an ensign on the battleship Illinois during the World War, yesterday obtained an order from Justice McCook directing Mrs. Mae Ballard to show cause why the alimony of $750 a week and court fees of $750 awarded her in a separation suit should not be reduced.

Ballard, now a salesman for a motion picture company, said the alimony is beyond his means and was on the allegation by his wife that he had received $50,000 from his mother, which he never received.

Ballard and his wife were married in 1917. She was then a widow, and in his counter claim for a separation asserts that Mrs. Ballard abandoned him while he was at Annapolis.

Ballard was on leave of absence from the naval academy when he was married. Mrs. Ballard had been an attendant at the cigar counter of a Louisville hotel.
